Full Day - Advanced

The Evolution-U Executive Negotiation Business Suite is a focused offer of engaging soft skills trainings, providing usable tools for better & measurable performance praised by our clients

Course Outline

Based on leading Harvard based research, this insightful one day training deals with the complexities of managing difficult negotiation scenarios including analysis of the structure of difficult negotiations, managing emotions while maintaining control, and learning techniques to communicate tough ideas without raising defensiveness.

Learning Objectives

By taking this course, participants will;

- Learn the differences between the interpersonal, tactical and structural challenges of difficult negotiations;
- Develop a framework to identify which type of conversation path a difficult negotiation is taking and how to deal with it to remain in dialogue;
- Understand how to adopt a “Learning Perspective” when negotiating, becoming aware of common difficult negotiation traps that result in poor outcomes, and developing a series of steps for managing such situations and achieve negotiated agreement;
- Learn techniques for leveraging negative emotions that can adversely impact negotiations and use these emotions to achieve clarity of thought and better deals;
- Develop tools for turning a difficult negotiation conversation into a productive ‘learning’ conversation;
- Discuss approaches to dealing with unethical or manipulative negotiators and understand the options while avoiding the emotional impact of feeling aggrieved or cornered.
- Participate in multiple case studies, role plays and break out sessions to discuss, apply and debate the principles introduced.

As well as instructor led presentation, this advanced negotiation training includes business focused case studies, group exercises and role play to engage participants. Participants will be expected to actively participate and there is the option of advanced preparation work for clients that prefer role play based on business relevant content particular to their industry.

This course is available in full day modules, for up to 12 people. Additional participants quoted upon request.
Level: Advanced.

Course Content

The Three Conversations of Difficult Negotiations

Research shows that there is an underlying structure present in difficult negotiations, and that the thoughts and feelings present at these times fall into three categories irrespective of the type of negotiation we are dealing with. Understanding this underlying structure and being aware of the common mistakes we make when falling into each of these three conversation categories is the starting point for being able to maintain control in difficult negotiations.

Adopting the Learning Perspective

When negotiations are heated, common reactions include arguing, blaming, defensive positioning, inaccurate assumptions, misunderstanding of intent and devaluing the other sides interests. Fortunately, each of these mistaken negotiation paths can be addressed by developing an understanding of the underlying triggers that typically cause each of them. By applying principles which are designed to increase awareness of when the negotiation is going off track and information flow is breaking down, it is possible to retain a learning perspective throughout difficult negotiations thus benefiting from increased information flow from the client and a better understanding of how to construct an acceptable agreement.

Role Play: Developing Interpersonal Skills

In this role play participants split into groups of three and role play a pre-prepared scenario whereby they identify three of the skills from the course so far that they want to practise. In each role play, one person will play the role of the lead negotiator, one the client and one the coach who's responsibility it is to direct and give feedback on the lead negotiator's performance in utilising the selected skills.

Developing Emotional Advantage in Negotiation

The best negotiators achieve great deals for themselves but also leave their opponents believing that they also received a good deal. Such a scenario cannot be achieved without conscious management of the emotional backdrop during deal making. Quoting recent research from Harvard Business School showing that we can regulate the emotional traps of anxiety, anger, disappointment and regret and in the course of doing so, achieve better deals, this section uses case studies to raise awareness of these emotional traps and debate the principles.

How to Create and Utilise a Learning Conversation

It helps if we pick our battles; sometimes it makes sense to engage in a difficult conversation during negotiation, sometimes it's better not to. Starting with the realization that we cannot change other people, a structure is introduced that allows participants to develop the competencies necessary for identifying which difficult conversations in which to engage. The principle of perceptual positions is discussed and referenced with case studies to generate tools for turning difficult into productive "learning" conversations.

Dealing with Difficult Tactics

When the other side uses tactics that are best difficult and at worse unethical or manipulative, and when we cannot easily walk away from the negotiation, we need to understand our options without the emotional impact of feeling aggrieved, cornered or egotistical.
